WHO IT FITS

Dogs who settle in a crate rather than fight one. Measure him lying on his side, nose to base of tail, and add six inches. If he has already chewed through wire, Ironside is the stronger build.

WILL IT FIT?

Measure your dog lying on his side, nose to base of tail, and add about six inches so he can turn round. Then measure the wall or the gap beside the sofa where it is going. The three sizes step up in length; take the larger of what the dog needs and what the room allows. It does not come with a bed, so put a mattress in the floor tray.

MATERIALS

Slim powder-coated steel

Wipe the top with a dry or slightly damp cloth; wipe the frame and tray with mild soapy water and dry.

Assembly & placement

GETTING STARTED

1. Choose the size by the dog and the room. Nose to base of tail plus about six inches, then the wall space. Take the larger of the two.
2. Build it with two people. A bolt-together frame, about half an hour with the supplied tools. Two people for the top.
3. Add a mattress. The floor is barred with a tray beneath, so put a mattress in it. One of our orthopedic beds sized to the crate floor is the usual answer.

BEFORE YOU START

- ☐ Your dog measured standing and lying, against the inside dimensions
- ☐ Floor space for the crate plus room for the doors to open
- ☐ A spot away from radiators and direct sun

PLACEMENT GUIDELINES

SIZE

Your dog should be able to stand, turn around and lie stretched out comfortably inside.

POSITION

Keep it in a room where the family spends time, with airflow around it and away from heat sources.

TOP SURFACE

Keep heavy items, cords and anything breakable off the top.

Safety. Never leave a collar or harness with hanging tags on a dog in a crate. Check latches and fixings regularly.
